In interview with Washington Post Solve Palestine issue first, Hussein tells U.S.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23 (R) - His Majesty King Hussein has said the United States cannot hope to build an anti-Soviet strategic alliance in the Middle East with Israel and Arab states until the Palestinian problem is solved.

The King, in an interview in Amman with the Washington Post, dismissed Secretary of State Alexander Haig's idea of bringing friendly Arab states into the "strategic alliance" announced after Prime Minister Menachem Begin's recent Washington visit.

"That sort of thinking is exactly why I think sometimes Washington has a rather simplistic attitude toward this area," the King was quoted as saying.

"Unless and until the Palestinian problem is resolved with justice and there is a just and lasting peace is achieved, there will be too many obvious elements against such a plan."

The Arab World, he said, still perceives Israel, rather than the Soviet Unioo, as the real threat to the area.

AWACS will triple warning time for Saudis, U.S. adviser explains

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23 (Agencies) — Selling airboroe electrooics gear to Saudi Arabia would more than triple the warning period for any air attack on Saudi oil fields, a senior White House official says. Richard Allen, President Reagan's national security affairs adviser and coordinator of administration efforts to gain congressional approval of the sale, told reporters on Monday that the Airborne Warning And Cootrol System (AWACS) aircraft involved are "an airborne detection device."

He denied the aircraft, if sold to Saudi Arabia. would have components to permit coordinatioo of an attack on any other country, but noted the aircraft would allow the Saudis time to scramble fighter aircraft to combat any potential air attack on their oil fields.

The administration proposes selling five of the planes, together with equipment to enhance the range and capability of Saudi Arabia's F-15 nircraft, in a $8.5 billion transaction. It regards Saudi Arabia as a key component in an emerging coalition of Middle East nations opposed to Soviet expansionism in the area. The sale can be halted if both houses of Congress pass resolutions of disapproval. The votes must come by the end of next month.

Allen said the administration had held off campaigning for congressional approval of the sale, first until President Reagan's economic package had been passed, and later to allow Mr. Reagan time to present the arguments for the sale directly to Israeli Prime Minister Begin, who visited Washington on earlier this month.

Some 50 U.S. senators have announced opposition to the sale, but Mr. Allen maintained that as individual senators are briefed on the content of the proposals "they are receiving ... information which they had heretofore not received. And so, as the true facts come clear ... we have the real prospect of making progress."

He explained that the AWACS "is the equivalent of taking a radar station, putting it atop a Boeing 707... and elevating it to 35,000 feet ... it allows this crucial difference to take place. Absent the AWACS, the warning time for any potential attack on Saudi od fields would be two to four minutes, which is an inadequate period of time for any competent air force in the entire world to scramble fighters... with AWACS, this warning time is increased to 12 to 15 minutes ... This is vital and crucial because that would give the opportunity to the Saudi air force to put its planes in the air and to take appropriate action."

Mr. Allen expressed confidence that the administration would convert opponents, now that the "orderly process for consideration" dictated by law is under way.

He pointed out that the life cycle of the system will require a "substantial American presence" in Saudi Arabia, starting with some 900 personnel and dwindling to 200. "We will know," he said,

"where the aircraft is flying." Mr. Allen declared AWACS is a "very valuable tool and it's a capable system ... it's not one that any nation would easily put at risk. As a matter of routine, we fly our AWACS well back from any border situations that would hazard conflict ....

calls for an independent Palestinian state with Jerusalem as its capital, in London and Paris, and French President Francois Mitterrand arrives in Saudi Arabia on Saturday for more talks.

Kuwaiti government sources said Kuwait would urge Mrs. Thatcher to recognise the Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO).

The EEC called last year for the PLO to be associated with Middle East peace talks. But European diplomats said it would be difficult to make a further move without the PLO and Israel at least conditionally recognising each other.

British and Gulf sources said prospects for a revived Gulf-EEC dialogue could figure prominently in Mrs. Thatcher's talks.

Arabised science study solves linguistic dilemma

Bv Dina Matar Special to the Jordan Times

AMMAN – The "Arabisation" of science textbooks and the teaching of science in Arabic at the two Jordanian universities were initially regarded with scepticism; and many thought the experiment would fail. ### Uniting through language

He added, "It is high time that we develop Arabic terminologies in science, culture and arts that can be used in the Arab World instead of using highly technical foreign terms."

Dr. Khalifeh maintains that the Arabic language is the only way to unite the Arab World: and although some believe that the use of translated editions at the universities has created a chaotic situation. "our students have been the beneficiaries of the project." he said.

Above and beyond its translation activities, the JAA sceks to create a unified Arabie scientific idiom.

In an interview with the Jordan Times, Dr. Khalifeh said. importance of the language. Dr. Khalifeh remarked," It is fanny that most countries have continue to use their own languages for instruction, and nevertheless they have become developed." He cated the Soviet Union as a good example.

To include the public in its language awareness campaign, the JAA publishes a quarterly periodical called the Journal of the Jordan Academy of Arabic, which has covered many subjects related to the eloquence of the Arabie language and its importance.

The JAA staff has now moved into a new permanent headquarters near the University of Jordan campus. Although the building is not completely finished nor adequately furnished, the staff have been working their since the

Correcting abuses

However, the JAA has also received a grant of about JD 30,000 from the Abdul Hameed Shoman Foundation, to help cover some of the expenses of the translation of second-year science lextbooks. "Some people think that Arab-isation is a backward step; but I believe they do not know what they are talking about," the academy president said. He added that a person's comprehension in his own language is twice that in a foreign language." What makes us so determined in our effort is the fact that the Arabic language has been abused, not used correctly, even by teachers and linguists," he Dr. Khalifeh helieves that the time has come for the Arabic language once more to be a medium of culture and communication -at least in the Arab World and among Arabs.

"It is time that we ask ourselves what has gone wrong and why." he allirmed, pointing out that "in general, the Arabic heing taught al our schools and universities has gone down the dram,"

Although the JAA's objectives are the same as those of other academies in the Arab World, the task of Arabisation has been a huge challenge, since it has been carried out singlehandedly. In 1980 the academy's expenditures exceeded its revenues. Production costs for the academy's translated textbooks amounted to JD 75,000, and the building costs have already exceeded JD 200,000.

"But our obligation to our heritage and culture is more important than a handful of money; we believe that what we are doing will, one day, bring the divided Arabs together again," Dr. Khalifeh predicted.

Does this science student find it difficult to cope with ordinary life as he learns science in English?

History in action

THE NEW MOVE by Israeli Defence Minister Ariel Sharon to appoint civilian Israelis instead of Israeli military personnel to administer the Israeli occupation of the West Bank and Gaza reminds us of the "Vietnamisation" policy that the Americans once tried in Vietnam. The difference, however, is that while the Americans tried to have the Vietnamese take over the American military role as a means for the Americans to pull out of a catastrophic situation, the Israelis are doing their deed to camouflage the fact that they would like to stay in perpetual control of the West Bank and Gaza.

It is appropriate today to remember those days in Vietnam, and how the ignominious American experiment in Vietnamisation ended in a shameful and humiliating helicopter evacuation off the roof of the American embassy. The lesson we should keep in mind is that substituting one kind of criminal for another simply changes the clothes of the criminal, without changing the underlying criminality of the process at hand. Substituting Vietnamese killers for American killers resulted in a sham. Substituting Israeli civilians for military personnel will have the same net result in the final analysis.

• The Israelis will try hard to find Palestinian quislings to that take charge of senior posts in the occupation administration. They might even succeed in finding a few, as the forces of facism did in Europe during the 1940s. But such events will ultimately be overwhelmed and discredited by the sheer force of history -- by the determination of human beings everywhere to live in freedom and dignity. The Vietnamisation fiasco took place less than a decade ago. Those who respect history should heed its lessons.

Socio-economic change

THE SHIFT in class structure which usually accompanies the process of fast development has been a layourite topic of many writers. They try to capture the change in morals and attitudes of those who undergo it. Yet the most captivaring story I have heard was narrated by a peasant woman from Jordan.

A plumber approached a family asking for the hand of their daughter in marriage. Hc was given the hrush because a plumber then was viewed as a man of low possibilities in terms of wealth and class prospects.

Hurt deeply by this rejection, the plumber quit his career, travelled abroad and got a degree in medicine.

Upon returning home he found his girl still waiting for him.

He again asked the girl's parents for her hand, but to his utmost dismay, he heard the unexpected answer: a medical doctor, what future do you have? If you were a plumber we would marry you our daughter." More serious literature can be cited. Thomas Hardy did not like those people who climbed the ladder of fame and fortune very fast. After giving them a chance to enjoy their lives for a while, he snapped those who did with a bag of surprises that would kill them. Look what he did to the main characters in his stories like

"Tess of D'Ubervilles". Mayor of Casterbridge". or "Far from the Madding Crowd". The late Italian movie director Lucino Visconti was also fascinated by the topic, and he turned the famous Italian story the "Leopard" into a film. The story tells us that a Sicilian nobleman, impoverished by the Italian Revolution, led by the Red Skirts, decided to exchange his daughter and name for money given to him by a no-body hoodlum whn struck it rich in the war.

now, if not in the future. At the Geneva meeting, the Saudis exercised this power with a nakedness which surprised both their friends and their foes.

OPEC's meeting, billed as "consultative" to avoid embarrassment if no agreement was reached, coincided with the shooting down in the Mediterranean of two Libyan Su-22 jets by two American F-14 Tomeat jetfighters. At almost any other time in OPEC's 21 years of existence such an incident would have caused uproar in the oil market. Yet at Geneva it caused barely a ripple: even Libya's own delegate, the articulate oil minister Abdussalam Zagaar, avoided direct comment, referring all questions to Tripoli.

When he likes what he sees he affords the speaker the smallest bint of a smile. When he does not, he twists his moull into a sharp granace as it he were spitting out a fish hone. The stopes on the table are diamonds and similar negotiations are taking place at a series of tables that line the great north-facing windows of Antwerp's diamond exchange, the venerable institution which lies at the hub of the world', largest diamond centre.

Although there are three other places in Antwerp where diamonds are traded -- the diamond club, the diamond ring and the free diamond trade -- the exchange preserves a unique cachet as a club to which the most highly esteemed and best-established traders belong.

"It is essential to come here every day to get the feel of the market, to meet people and to set up deals," said one dealer, who insisted on anonymity.

The exchange, lying at the heart of a diamond industry which had a turnover of some $4 billion last year, combuses the dignity of a private dub with the frenzied activity and dedication to business of a stock exchange.

While games of chess and leisurey conversations proceed, millions of dollars worth of precious gems are being rejected and sold. Brokers, of whom there are about 1,000 in Antwerp, take a one per cent commission on deals they set up. The exchange is a busy place because some 75 per cent of the world's production of cut diamonds pass through Antwerp, where diamnnds have been traded for the past 500 years. It is a place that is hard to penetrate, setting stiff rules for entry and banishing with alacrity any members that fail to live up to its high standards of rectitude. Mr. de Rey said that some 75 per cent of the exchange's 2.000 members were Jews -- 2 reflection of the Jewish domination of the Antwerp diamond community which began when Jews flocked here at the time of the Spanish inquisition in 1939, there were 1.645 members of the bourse. At the end of World War II there were just 355 left after the deaths of most of them in Nazi concentration camps. "We make it very difficult to get in bere because we want to assure that the dealings that go on here, often for large sums of money, are conducted hon-estly," Mr. de Rey said. A candidate for membership must be sponsored by two members, have a certificate of good conduct from the Belgian police, and have at least two years experience in the trade. He then has to be approved by the exchange's 12-member committee. Finally an application for membership is posted on the exchange's notice board much like marriage banns. Anybody with reasonable objections to the candidate may then come forward. The notice board also carries grim announcements of ... banishment of certain members for dishonest dealing

Further disillusionment

ARAB PRESS COMMENTARY

AL RA'l: Prime Minister Mudar Badran's statement to the National Consultative Council on Monday represents the official Jordanian stand with regard to the American-Israeli declaration of a bilateral strategic agreement.

It was in response to the American-Israeli declaration that dealt a blow to the moderate policies of Jordan and a number of Arab states. Badran's statement pointed to the impact of such an agreement on the Arabs' aspirations and goals as well as to the strategy of such agreement that encourages further Israeli aggression and brings about polarisation.

The declaration of the American-Israeli alliance has given further assertion to the import ol a message which His Majesty King Hussein sent to President Reagan following Israel's raid on the Iraqi nuclear plant. The King had said in the message that the Arabs were disillusioned and frustrated after years of pursuing a policy ol close cooperation with the United States. This fact however, has manifested itsell once again today, at an unprecedented level.

Jordan's clear views and firm stands therefore, do not allow any chance for the U.S. to exercise its tricks on the Arahs, and they also help to abori all the evil dreams of Israel's former Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan, who had called for creating bilateral alliances between the U.S. and a number of Arab countries.

In view of the U.S.-Israeli alliance, the Arah masses will naturally 10m their attention to the Arab resources and Arah funds deposited in the United States. Maintaining Arah deposits in U.S. banks and investing in American businesses are unacceptable practices to these masses now, since the new alliance is bound to channel these funds to Israeli businesses, and to benefit Zionism. The Arahs' national duty now calls on them to safeguard their interests, their independent will and national character, free from any superpower hegemony and foreign influence.

False talks

AL DUSTOUR: The resumption of the so-called autonomy negotiations in Cairo today is absolutely of no significance to the Israelis who do not expect the talks to yield any results. To them these negotiations will by no means affect the system of their rule and practices in the occupied Arab territories or their programmes of gradually swallowing up the West Bank and the Gaza Strip.

Undeterred by their failure in finding a substitute for the Palestine Liberation Organisation among the Arab inhabitants to help them in their evil designs, the Israelis are pursuing the same plan aimed at weakening the Arab inhabitants' steadfastness and resistance.

Nevertheless, we must admit that this steadfastness, despite its positive results so far, cannot be strong enough to withstand Israel's repressive and terrorist campaigns.

At this particular time Jordan's role in maintaining support to our kinsmen in the occupied territories at all levels gains an added significance. Jordan's continued help strengthens their determination in resisting occupation and confronting Zionist conspiracies. Such confrontation should be an Arab national commitment which Jordan will never abandon.

The Arabs everywhere should realise that the autonomy negotiations, and the Israeli practices inside the occupied territories, and two faces of the same coin, designed to enable Israel to annex the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. However, realising this fact is not enough; and the Arabs can and should take practical steps for helping the Arab inhabitants under Israeli rule and strengthen their steadfastness. tion a minor complaint.

I arrived on an Alia flight from Baghdad on a private visit to Amman. I have no complaint whatsoever on the way the flight was conducted, nor on the services so willingly rendered by the crew, the stewards and the hostesses. Everything went fine. My only complaint, however, was from the rough handling of the baggage between plane and belt. Alia's porters were throwing cases and crates just like empty cigarene packs. My brand new Samsonite was forced open by the impact and my personal belongings scattered all over the belt. Struggling with the Samsonite for a considerable time, I was unable to fix it, as the locks were terribly forced. I had to pay a porter at the arrival lounge to fetch a piece of rope of chord with which to fasten the suitcase, only to be opened after a while for Customs inspection on the rude insistence of the Customs Official, from whom some consideration was expected towards an elderly and exhausted guest from a sister country.

May I request Alia for a little more care in handling the baggage and Jordanian Customs officials for a little more courtesy and consideration in carrying out their duties and in dealing with visitors to this hospitable country.

To the Editor:

With reference to the complaint voiced by Mr. Mumayiz concerning the mishandling of luggage at the airport, allow me first to express my surprise how anyone can, let alone a passenger at the terminal, see the mechanics of loading or unloading an aircraft.

However, I would like to point out that at the airport we have two conveyer-belts to cater for 1500 passengers at a given time. As you know, sometimes we handle five to six aircraft within the span of twenty to thirty minutes. As for porters, they might forget (and this is not an excuse) that they are handling luggage. Anyway, the point is very well taken and it will be looked into.

Amideast English programmes

All of us at Amideast were very pleased to see Mohammad Ayish's report on the U.S. student visa process (Jordan Times, Sept. 17-18). It contains a great deal of information which we expect will be very helpful to Jordanian students and their parents in deciphering the U.S. higher educational system and the requirements for U.S. student visas.

However, 1 would like to correct an erroneous statement made in the article in reference to Amideast. 1 quote: "unlike Amideast, ELS can get acceptances for students who are planning to attend an intensive English programme rather than go directly to university".

This is simply not true. Amideast offices across the Arab World provide botb information on bundreds of English language programmes in the U.S. and place students who need additional language training in pre-academic English language programmes. This service is an automatic and integral part of our academic placement service.

Alam McNamara Director, America-Mideast Educationall & Training Services, Amideast

the point. From now on Nigenan oil. with official prices ranging up to $40 a barrel, would be offered to all customers with a S4 per barrel discount. The reasons ---"adverse market conditions" -were obvious. Nigerian oil wasover-priced: the only way to finance the nation's development plans was to rebuild export volumes by the humiliating mechanism of a price cut. But if the Nigerian decision marks a defeat for the Lagos administration, any victory for the American oil company executives already invited to Lagos for contract negotiations was vicarious.

The true victor is Saudi Arabia. The world's largest oil exporter is now the unchallenged arbiter -- at least for the moment -- of both the affairs of OPEC and the world oil price. The Saudi view is superficially straightforward: for the sake of the world economy and OPEC's own long-term interests, the 13 OPEC states must set their prices against a low-level marker" determined by Saudi Arahia. To enforce their view, the Saudis will continue to flood the market with low-priced oil, thus squeezing out their high-pricing adversaries.

The argument is unquestionably powerful: in ten years OPEC's average price has risen by over 1,500 per cent, thanks to the two price explosions of 1973/74 and 1979. It is, then, hardly surprising that demand for oil is falling at such a rate -- over 7 per cent last year and probably another 3 per cent this year; and that many experts both within OPEC and outside it believe that genuine structural change is taking place in energy consumption. Obviously, that change cannot be to OPECs benefit. The Saudis have an additional worry in that if the change happens too rapidly their vast oil teserves, some 26 per cent of the world's proven reserves, will become much less valuable rather than an appreciating nest-egg for the Saudi generations of the next century.

But however valid the economic arguments, they still do not ring completely true. Oil is not a commodity like coffee, sugar or phosphate, susceptible to the whims of either the weather or the commodity markets. Oil has an extra dimension: it is intensely political, the lifeline of the developed world and the sole elaim to international' respect for OPEC's members. Quite simply, oil means power

Yamani's instructions

The fact is that the Saudis stuck to their guns -- or more correctly Crown Prince Fahd stuck to his own particular guns. In two days of pre-conference haggling and then three days of the conference itself, the Saudi position remained unchanged. The Saudi minister. Sheikh Ahmad Zaki Yamani, had precise instructions which survived both direct pleas to King Khaled from Saddam Hussein of Iraq and other OPEC beads of state and also Yamani's own willingness to compromise. Saudi Arabia, producing a marketdictating 45 per cent of OPEC's oil, was willing to increase its price by $2 a barrel to $34 only if the rest of OPEC accepted a ceiling of $37. That, Yamani said later, was rest of OPEC accepted a ceiling of $37. That, Yamani said later, was the deal agreed before Geneva and he had come only on the understanding that the deal would be put into practice.

But a ceiling of $37 would mean a humiliating price cut for Libya, Algeria and Nigeria. Not only that, it would also mean a price cut by almost every other OPEC member, since the majority hase their quality and marketproximity differentials on an assumed level for the Saudi "marker" of $36. The Venezuelan minister Dr. Humberto Calderon Berti, known as an arch-moderate and perennial mediator in OPEC quarrels, surprised everyone by adamantly refusing to go below the $36 level and made much of the point that be alone among OPEC ministers had a democratic electorate to consider. This electorate, he said, would not appreciate a price cut while Venzuela still rctained its customers. (The Saudis sarcastically pointed out that if Venezuela's product export prices were translated into crude oil terms their marker was more like $35 or even lower). The obvious answer was a compromise at $35: the "hawks" would lower their prices but the nean of by two at jetigent"), the alternative was surrender by the non-Saudis. According to Sheikh Ali Khalifah al-Sabah of Kuwait, "nine or ten" ministers on the last day were prenarket. arely a blegate, Abdusdirect estions the non a properly unified OPEC pricing structure for the first time in more than two years.

But it was not to be: the political and psychological hurdles remained insurmountable. For all the conciliatory gesture of a token one million barrels a day production cut by Saudi Arabia (not nearly enough to mop up a glut estimated at 2-3 mbd) the OPEC stage remains a battlefield awaiting another conflict in December in Abu Dhabi. The Nigerian pricecut has already been followed by despairing efforts by Libya and Algeria to maintain official prices through the fiction of oil barter deals with foreign suppliers. With the hawks in disarray, the Saudis must surely win: the economic trends are unlikely to change dramatically without some disaster such as another war in the Middle East.

Saudi strategy

The question is whether the victory will be worth the effort. It is easy to connect Saudi oil policy with the desire for AWACS planes from a pro-Israeli Reagan administration. It is similarly easy to say that Fahd's helief in the axis with Washington overrides Israel's raids on Baghdad and southern Lebanon. But what is easy is not necessarily either profound or accurate. Aspects of Saudi strategy like the AWACS deal must also be set alongside Fahd's eight-point Middle East peace plan, and Riyadh's view of Gulf security in the aftermath of the Iranian revolution and during the present context of the Iraq-Iran war. Two years ago, when Sadat signed Egypt's peace treaty with Israel, it was a sign that the Saudis counted for next to nothing: they were money-men without muscle and their weakness was emphasised when the rest of OPEC ignored their pleas for pricemoderation.

Poorer Arab states to get $500m this year

KUWAIT, Sept. 25 (R) - Finance ministers from five Arab oil exporters met today to discuss how to allocate $500 million to development projects in poorer Arab countries before the end of this year, officials said.

The tive, Saudi Arabia, Kuwan, Iraq, United Arab Emirates and Qatar, have pledged five billion dollars over 10 years, starting this year, for a plan called the Arab development decade which was adopted by an Arab summit conference in Amman last November.

The ministers, who met here earlier this year, have asked the Kuwait-based Arab Fund for Economic and Social Development to prepare a list of projects that need tinance in non-oil-producing Arab countrics. There were no immediate details about the plans under consideration in today's meeting.

The new facility would extend tong-term, very low interest loans to finance development projects aimed at achieving Arab economic integration and raising the standard of living in the less developed Arab states.

Springboks go on with hide-and-seek matches

ALBANY, New York, Sept. 23 (R) - South Africa's national rugby team, defying demonstrators, heavy rains and New York's governor, overwhelmed a local U.S. team by 41 points to nil last night in the only public match of a hide-and-seck American tour. Governor Hugh Carey had hanned the metch, eleiming that it might provoke a riot by anti-apartheid demonstrators, but it went ahead after he was overruled in the courts.

The metch, pleyed on a muddy field at the municipal Bleecker Stadium in intermittent heavy rains, ettracted few spectators and about 1,500 protesters who paraded outside the ground chanting Springboks go home."

The demonstrators, who had marched to the ground from opposite sides of Albany. surged towards the stadium gates at one point but were blocked by lines of police.

The police, who had shotguns, teargas and bomh-sniffing German shepherd dogs in reserve, reported arresting one man for illegal possession of a knife.

The Springboks avoided anti-apartheid demonstrators et the first match of their U.S. tour hy keeping its venue secret.

They were escorted to and from last night's game hy police after spending most of the rainy day at an Alhany hotel-awaiting the outcome of Mr. Carey's legal attempts to block the match.

On Monday, e federal judge in Albany overruled Mr. Carey's han on the match and yesterday three appeal judges in New York and U.S. supreme court justice Thurgood Marshall in Washington rejected the state's appeal against the decision.

A bomh shattered the offices of the Eastern Rugby Union, sponsor the Alhany match, early yesterday. No one wa Union president Thomas Selfridge said he was uncertain whether the bomh was planted by opponents of the Springbok tour.

Solidarity compromises on worker self-management issue with gov't

WARSAW, Sept. 23 (R) — A major compromise by Solidarity on the issue of worker self-management was welcomed in Warsaw today and official sources said it could help ease the crisis in government-union relations.

The national executive of the independent trade union decided last night to drop earlier demands for workers to have the exclusive right to hire and fire industry chiefs. It agreed instead to share such decisions with the communist authorities. Solidarity threatened at the first round of its national congress in Gdansk to boycott the Sejm |parliament] if it adopted a government law on industrial management without holding a national referendum on the issue.

The Soviet Union spearheaded on unprecedented propaganda assault on the union, and the Warsaw leadership signalled that the

Tunis bans traditional dress

TUNIS, Sept. 23 (A.P.) - The Tunisian government has issued a directive that bans the wearing of the chador in schools and government offices. The chador is a robe worn by women that covers their bodies from head to foot. A circular distributed by the ptime minister's office and the ministry of education said people wearing the chador would not be admitted into schools and government buildings.

2 Soviets sentenced to death

MOSCOW, Sept. 23 (R) - Two men have been sentenced to death in the Soviet city of Kazan for murdering and robbing travellers after offering them lifts. the trade union daily Trud has reported. The two, named only as V. Postovit and V. Osipov. picked up stranded travellers outside airports and railway stations, drove them into the country and battered them to death. Trud said. It did not say how many people they murdered.

Chinese coal minister to dig coal

PEKING, Sept. 23 (R) -- All officials in the Chinese coal ministry, including the minister himself, will do a stint of work in the mines each year or perform some other physical labour, according to a ministry statement today. The officials will work for different periods depending on seniority. For example the minister, vice-ministers and other top officials will work for a week each year. health permitting, and high-levels officials will do 60 days. The practice of officials leaving their desks to engage in manual labour was widespread during the Maoist rule but was quietly discarded after Mao died. But the coal ministry announcement is the latest sign that the idea is making a comeback. Senior Communist Party officials were recently reported to be sweeping paths once a week inside the walled compound in central Peking where they work.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 23 (A.P.) - One of two men who plunged to his death from the Golden Gate bridge was an apparent stilcide and the other was trying to perform a stunt, police said. The two jumped the 61 metres to the chilly waters of San Franeisco Bay within 90 minutes of each other early Monday, police said. The jumps apparently were unrelated. The first man carried documents identifying himself as Peter Angelo Wint, 25, Bot the corner's office withheld official identification until a could examine dental charts. He apparently intended to survive the fall. authorities said. He wore a wersnit, padded pants and a neek brace. and carried a snotkel and two filejackets, the coast goard said. He was pulled from the water breathing by a coast goard crew but "didn't make it to the pier," said a police spokesman. The second man, identified as 18, hing his suit coal containing a message to his mother on a bridge rail at about 8:45 a.m. He has been hanging from the rail a few minutes before falling to his death, authorities said. Coronet's investigator Mike Seannell said the man left two suicide notes in a spiral notebook in his jacket. "I am God now," said one, "I love you," the other said. " Live and let live, but more importantly, die and let die."

In a prepared statement calling for the sale to proceed, the ambassadors pointed out that "the AWACS would be a major step in the coordination of American and Saudi delence of the Arabian peninsula and its vital resources."

However, one of the ambassadors indicated his support applied only to the AWACS and not to the 1-15 enhancement that is a part of the package proposed by the Reagan Administration. During a press conference called to release the statement, a questioner noted the statement referred only to AWACS and asked if that included other parts of the package.

Amnesty International appeals against execution by lethal injection in U.S.

LONDUN, Sept. 23 (A.P.) - Eleven promoent European doctors have appealed to doctors in Oklahoma to refuse to take part in what would be the first ever-execution by lethal injection in the United States: Annesty International said today,

The London-based human rights organisation said two telegrams were sent to the Oklahoma Medical Association declaring that participation by doctors in executions would be a ciplation of medical ethics.

The telegrams were sent by French Nabel prize-winners Dr. Andre Leoff and Prof. Fancois Jacob and others in Ance, Ireland, Sweden, Switzerland and Britain and from Amnesty International's medical advisory board.

Thomas "Sonny," Hass who was convicted of morder in 1977 and condemned to die by lethal injection, was granted a 30-day postponement of execution Sept. 9 to allow legal arguments on his case to continue.

He is among about 850 people under sentence of death in the United States, nearly 150 of whom face execution by lethal injection under new laws in four states: Oklahoma, Idaho, Texas and New Mexico.

Amnesty's medical advisory board, consisting of doctors from Canada, Denntark, Sweden and France, noted that Oklahoma's law would require a dictor to determine that poison flows into the prisoners years and to decide when death has occurred.

These tasks should not be undertaken by any doctor," the board said. It also noted that the American medical association had declared that doctors should not take part in executions.

said, "but there would be a decline." Mr. West pointed to the sale as part of the United States strategic interest in the area, noting that Sandi Arabia long had "perceived Soviet aggression, either overtly or covertly, as a threat." Meanwhile, the National Association of Arab Americans (NAAA) reported it had found some soft spots in the coalition of senators who last week signed a resolution opposing the AWACS sale.

David Sadd, NAAA Executive Director, said his organisation had contacted all 1000 Senators, 501 of whom had signed as cosponsors of a resolution of disapproval of sale of military equipment to Saudi the 50 supporters of the resolution, 12 had indicated they were waivering in their support. According to Sadd, live of these Senators said it was "very likely" they would change and futer said it was "possible". Saild declined to identify the 12, through he did note six were Democrats, six Republicans.

Mr. Sadd pointed out that the AWACS sale still must be unted on by the Senate Loreign Relations Committee and the full Senate, and those who had cosponsored the resolution of disapproval still could vote against the resolution or could abstain.

Mr. Sadd, at a morning press conference, ootlined the NAAA position on the proposed sale--a position that seemed to be very much along the lines of the position taken by the Reagan administration. He said President Reagan should be given tall support in Congress for his decision to sell air defence equipment to Saude Arabia.

"The sale is necessitated by the tunilamental changes in the strategic situation in the Gull region," he said, listing among these changes the Soviet invasion of Atghanistan, the instability of Iran and the war between Iran and

The said the sale would "add to the strategic ability of the United States to defend against potential Soviet threats to the oil jugular of the West,"

Mr. Sadd told reporters the sale is for defensive purposes and would enable Saudi Arabia m defer attacks on its oil fields and population centres and that such a sale "will not pose a threat to any other country."

"The sale must be judged solely on its own merits and on the national interests of the 1'nited States," he said, adding that the sale would strengthen American national interests" by meeting the legitimate defence needs of a major Arab friend and trading partner in the Middle East."

Mt. Sadd also warned that failure to approve the sale could cause Saudi Atabia to turn to Europe to meet its detence needs, a move that would reduce American leverage and influence in the tegion and also transfer the economic benefits of the sale from the United States to other countries

The sale price of the entire delence package has been listed at S8.500 million.
